200,000 GERMANS ENCIRCLED AT MINSK Germany Throws 11 Divisions into Battle at Caen NAVY ANNOUNCES NEW ADVANCE ON SAIPAN

Infantrymen And Marines Sweep Island

6,015 Japs Killed In 16-Day Battle

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP)—Marines and infantrymen, aided by planes, artillery and warship bombardment, have pressed forward along the entire front on Saipan island in the Marianas, the navy reported tonight.

Gains ranged from 500 yards to a mile, the Pacific fleet communiqué said, adding that on the right flank American forces are within five and a half miles of the northern tip of the strategic island.

Penetrate Garpana
On the left flank, our troops have penetrated Garpana, the island capital, and seized heights overlooking the town and Tanapag harbor.

Charan Tabute, a mountain village, also has been captured by troops in the center.

"Large quantities of enemy equipment, including food and munitions have fallen into our hands," the communiqué said.

The ground advances were made on Saturday, the same day that Japanese airmen attempted to attack American transports and vessels guarding the transports. No damage was caused. Two of the enemy aircraft were shot down.

The communiqué also told of additional attacks against Truk Atoll in the Carolinas and raids on remaining Japanese positions in the Marshalls on Friday and Saturday.

6,015 Japs Killed
At least 6,015 Japanese have been killed in the first sixteen days of bitter fighting on Saipan island.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

The refuge, representing nearly one-third of the estimated 20,000 Japs in Saipan's garrison, refers only to those buried by the Americans. The slowly retreating Japanese have taken their wounded and some of their dead with them.

1,474 Americans Killed
American dead were 1,474 for approximately the same period. There were 878 Japs missing and 7,400 wounded.

Only 200 Japanese soldiers were taken prisoner during the period—from "D" day June 14 through June 29.

Eighty Japanese tanks were destroyed or captured. This, by far the largest number of tanks the veteran American marines and soldiers have encountered in any Pacific action, gives a clue to the ferocity of the fighting.

Meantime Nimitz reported that the Yank forces, made up of veterans of every major campaign in the Central Pacific made small gains in the central sector.

Cherbourg Soon To Be Used Again

By LEWIS HAWKINS
SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 2 (AP)—The Germans "did a very clever job of demolition" at Cherbourg, but no worse than expected, and clearance of the port now is going forward rapidly, Maj. Gen. Cecil Ray Moore, chief of the United States army engineers in the European theatre of operations, said today.

The general, sent in with the Ninth division when they took the port, found the beaten Nazis had scuttled almost every ship in the harbor. They also damaged the signal control system of all the waterfront railways and blasted the longer bridges.

Moore said the port should not be regarded as "another Naples." He said it was primarily a passenger and not a cargo port, and handled only one-sixteenth of the Naples pre-war tonnage.

Potentially, he said, it is capable of handling about a seventh as much as Naples, which cleared 3,800,000 tons in 1938.

Moore, 30, lives at Harrisonburg, Va.

Many American Officials Favor Delay in Long-Term Peace Plans

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP)—There is a growing possibility that, contrary to the pattern of history, this war may not be settled by a final spectacular peace conference and an omnibus treaty.

Instead, many American officials privately are advocating (1) that short-term arrangements for winding up the European war be made, and (2) a series of separate agreements and (3) that long-term European

German Nurses Freed: Firing Ceases While Americans Return Eight Women to Own Line

By DON WHITEHEAD
WITH AMERICAN FORCES AT BALLEROY, FRANCE, July 2 (AP)—One of the strangest battlefield scenes in all the invasion of France occurred this afternoon in no-man's-land near here when eight German nurses captured in Cherbourg were returned to the enemy lines.

For thirty minutes the guns stopped roaring, snipers held their fire and the mortars were silent while two ambulances and a jeep rolled down the lonely road between the lines. A few hundred yards beyond Caumont the procession stopped and Capt. Quentin Roosevelt, son of Brig. General Theodore Roosevelt, and Capt. Fred Gherke stepped out.

They were met by two German officers who had a party of enlisted men well to their rear. "The enemy officers saluted stiffly."

One said in English, "It's a very hot day, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is," Captain Roosevelt answered.

And then the German nurses climbed into the ambulance and walked down the road to the German headquarters.

Germans Taking Hard Beating

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, July 2 (AP)—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's armies in four bloody, fruitless days of battering at the British salient across the Odon have had the wind knocked out of them, and tonight the enemy is lying silent and apparently bewildered as to what to do next against the explosive violence of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's "strong-box" defenses.

Rommel has suffered "a very bloody crack on the nose," one British staff officer said, and "the Boche took such a knock yesterday he is unable to stir today."

30 Nazi Tanks Smashed
At least thirty Nazi tanks were destroyed or knocked out of action in yesterday's fighting which raged from 6:30 a. m. to midnight.

"Supreme headquarters said forty German tanks had been knocked out Saturday."

German infantry with tank support attacked almost continuously through the woods and apple orchards on the British west flank in the Grainville-Sur-Odon. Le Haut Du Bosq, and Rauray area.

Coolly, British gunners pumped tons of steel into the enemy with the result that German tanks and infantry alike, faltered, and broke into confused retreat without a single infiltration being maintained.

Germans Launch Drive in France

French Patriots Driven to Hills

By LOUIS NEVIN
IRUN, SPAIN, July 2 (AP)—Germans in southwestern France have launched a general offensive in the Dordogne region with tanks and bombers to drive French patriots back into the hills and after two days of fighting have recaptured Bergerac, it was reported here today.

A correspondent with the Bordeaux newspaper, Petite Gironde, who entered Bergerac with a German column, said the German commander "symbolically" handed the city back to collaborationist French officials in a ceremony in the main square of that important rail city.

From Bergerac, the French correspondent said, the Germans advanced on Saint Cyprien, which the Maquis abandoned, and "liberated" 150 collaborationists who had been held there.

A dispatch from Toulouse said that while the German columns entered Bergerac, the Maquis transferred their activities fifty miles south, where they took over the rail junction at Marmande, cutting the important Cahors-Bordeaux railroad line.

Farther north Patriots destroyed a railroad bridge over the Loire river at Varennes. The Paris press said eleven persons were killed and many injured when a train plunged into the river from the dynamite-wrecked bridge.

Problems be handled by the proposed United Nations council and assembly.

Some of President Roosevelt's advisers are among those who contend that the fact of a complete German defeat. Their argument includes these points:

The basic political decision of a peace conference was made when the

Panzer Corps From Russia Now in France

Nazis Battered By British Fire

By JAMES M. LONG
SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, July 3 (AP)—The German command has thrown eleven divisions—including a panzer corps from Russia—into the furious defense of Caen, but lost at least forty tanks and hundreds of men in a single day of vain ram-thrusts against the British wedge of steel southwest of that fortress city.

Torrents of British fire battered the Nazis so badly in their costly assaults Saturday that they were "unable to stir" yesterday, a staff officer in the field declared, and Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was handed "a very bloody crack on the nose."

Tank Corps Transposed
At least eleven German divisions are engaged in the Caen sector of Eastern Normandy—five SS armored and two regular armored divisions, plus four infantry divisions, supreme headquarters disclosed last night.

One tank corps of two to four divisions was transferred from the Russian front, where it was in action as recently as three months ago.

But despite this power, Rommel's repeated hammer blows were shattered by Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's defenses, and the Germans on Sunday gave up, at least temporarily, the effort to break the salient thrown across the Odon river southwest of Caen—the stronghold guarding the 120-mile road to Paris.

Nazis Fall To Hold Gains
The Nazis had lashed out twenty-five times in seventy-two hours—usually in battalion strength of perhaps up to 600 men—and only once broke through for a penetration that soon was erased, supreme headquarters said.

At least forty Nazi tanks were knocked out Saturday alone, and field dispatches said the German troops suffered "elaborate losses."

These vain thrusts apparently knocked the wind out of the Germans, and last night the enemy was lying silent and apparently bewildered as to what to do next against the explosive violence of Montgomery's "strong-box" defenses.

Said Associated Press front correspondent Roger Greene.

One assault at 4 a. m. Sunday met a "torrent of steel that threw the enemy into confusion and drove him back before he even reached the British lines," and after that the Nazi attacks slackened, Greene reported.

Allied Strategy Revealed
Another field dispatch said the Allied strategy was to occupy ground vital to the enemy, forcing him to fight back "in order to kill as many Germans as possible."

Even though using elements of eleven divisions, buttressed by strategic reserves and expanded for the first time by troops from Russia, Rommel had failed to win back a yard of ground. Since D-Day, the British alone have destroyed at least 182 German tanks.

By noon, Sunday, patrols of Tommies were scouring the countryside in the area of Evreux and Esquay, at the lower edges of the salient driven southwest of Caen, the stronghold guarding the road to Paris.

Berlin broadcasts said ten British divisions, including four armored units, were engaged in this sector, and declared the fighting "exceeds the tremendous battles of the First World War."

Cherbourg Being Reported
Americans on the Cherbourg front, with all enemy resistance mopped up, were freed for new operations. Work was rushed on Cherbourg port as a funnel to build up an overpowering Allied battering rain.

Winged Bombs Anger Britons

Churchill Asked To Combat Them

LONDON, July 2 (AP)—Germany's blind barrage of robot bombs fell throughout the night and morning on Southern England, leaving a trail of wreckage and civilian suffering, and Britons, grimly digging out their dead, looked to Prime Minister Winston Churchill for a report on what has been done and what is contemplated to beat the Nazi weapon.

The premier, who personally toured robot defenses last week, was expected to make a statement in the House of Commons Tuesday.

Lull in Afternoon
There was a lull in the attacks the beating of the Pax De Calais in the afternoon, coinciding with launching grounds by American bombers. But once again there were tragic incidents, among the worst of which were blasted surface shelters. Rescuers, part of whose gear was smashed by another winged bomb, dug through the night for survivors, while ambulances clanged and loud speakers called the roll, checking casualties. Sound detectors were being used to probe the rubble.

Eight Believed Killed
It was feared that eight persons, including children, died in the wreckage of houses. Some people were killed after spending the night in shelters. A man and woman were crushed in their bed by falling masonry.

One man was killed under the debris of his house while his wife, who had been cooking dinner, was blown out of the kitchen into the garden and escaped with minor injuries.

Wallace Leaves China for Home; Praises Chinese Will To Resist

LANCOW, CHINA, July 2 (AP)—Vice President Henry A. Wallace left for home today after a visit here to the shrine containing the supposed remains of Genghis Khan.

In a farewell statement the vice president said he had learned during his twelve-day visit to this country that "in spite of economic difficulties and current military reverses the spirit of resistance to Japan continues strong in the Chinese."

"I've found our United States army officers and men full of fight in the best American tradition," he added. "At the headquarters and forward base of the Fourteenth air force headquarters of the Twentieth Bomber Command I found our aviators confident of their ability to give the Japanese plenty to worry about."

The Twentieth Bomber Command is the B-29 Superfortress outfit. Wallace arrived in Chungking June 29 after a trip across Russian Siberia.

Yesterday the vice president walked across dragon cloud bridge and climbed halfway up Prosperity mountain to lay a wreath of pink paper flowers at the shrine which countless Chinese suppose contains the dust of Genghis Khan.

A slide trip by automobile south of Lanchow through forty miles of the hills of Kansu province gave Wallace a close-up of erosion along the yellow river where the earth looks like the face of the moon as well as a view of the green hills where herdsmen roam.

Commandos Roam Germany: 50,000 Escaped Prisoners Strike Fear into Hearts of Nazi Public

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ
MADRID, July 2 (AP)—Twenty thousand squads of kill-or-be-killed commandos now roam the heart of Germany, striking fear into the hearts of officials and householders alike as they plough doggedly toward their ultimate goal—junction with guerrilla forces operating in the German rear.

From various informants reaching here the story has been pieced together concerning these 50,000 men—all foreign prisoners who escaped from Germany within the single fortnight following the Allied invasion of France.

Work in Small Groups
Thirty thousand of them are said to be Russians, who, like the Poles and Balkan Slavs, know that it is certain death for them to be caught. So they operate in small groups, seldom more than five in number, and often all alone.

"A householder's life anywhere in Germany now is one of constant fear that the slightest noise in the house at night may be an escaped prisoner ready to slit his throats if we make a move and betray his presence," said a neutral who lived near Leipzig. "The scourge of the farms and small country villages are thousands of foreigners who move in the dark."

Leipzig Is Crossroads
All seemed to agree that the Leipzig district was the "crossroads" of escapes—Czechs and Serbs passing from Northern and Western Germany on their way to their homelands, Russians and Poles from Western and Southern Europe; French, Belgians and Dutch southbound from the great Pomeranian, East Prussian and Silesian labor and prison camps.

Many of the Russians are deserters from German SS units, and are armed and sometimes even uniformed, their insignia for each district simply by killing German soldiers. They sometimes have hand grenades in their pockets, for use when and if cornered.

Since the invasion officials of villages and towns in upper Bavaria have asked and obtained removal of all Russian prisoners in farm and factory labor, in fear of mass revolt. And now the escaping French are reported getting the same treatment as the Russians when caught in Germany—the third degree and execution in groups—because the Germans know that Frenchmen too, now probably join with guerrilla bands when they reach their own country.

Showdown Battle For Saipan Looms

By HOWARD HANDLEMAN
Representing the Combined American Press, ABOARD JOINT EXPEDITIONARY FLAGSHIP, SAIPAN, MARIANAS ISLANDS, July 2 (U. S. 8 time)—(Via navy radio)—A showdown battle for Saipan was imminent today, with marine and army troops slugging their way down jungle covered slopes of Mount Ta-pachau into defenses surrounding the principal remaining core of Japanese resistance.

American tanks, halftracks and infantry battered slowly into areas of increasing resistance, fighting Japanese in caves, Japanese in trees, Japanese behind rocks.

Japs Fighting Hard
The Japanese opposed the advance with mortars, machine guns, rifles, and occasionally light tanks. But they have been unable so far to stem the superior American power.

The terrain is a terrible foe for the invaders.

The chief fighting is on Tapotchau slopes, where Americans are encircling heavy Japanese defenses behind Garapan town on Tanapag harbor.

Although Saipan is already the hottest Pacific campaign, the heaviest single battle probably still is to come. Marines and soldiers who are beating their way toward the climax know it. Some have been able to see the Japanese concentrating ahead and know what work is cut out for them.

Every objective is a ridge. Every ridge is honey-combed with caves.

Casualties Heavy
Casualties continue to be heavy. But the marines and soldiers are getting more satisfaction now as they close with the enemy. They know they are killing Japanese and pushing them back.

Northern Garapan and harbor installations which the Japanese massed to protect, have been taking a terrible pounding from land, sea and air. A huge fire was started at Tanapag two days ago and is still blazing, spewing a gigantic pillar of black smoke.

Somewhere behind the smoking wreckage Americans expect to come to grips with the largest concentration of the enemy the have met on Saipan.

Russians Smash Ahead in Great Drive for City

Important Railway Center Captured

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM
LONDON, July 2 (AP)—The 200,000 German defenders of Minsk were being clamped in a steel vise today as lightning columns of the Red army snatched the two main escape railways leading to Poland and pressed to within twelve and one-half miles northeast of this last enemy bastion in White Russia, Moscow disclosed tonight.

One column seized Kranevo, just across the border in Poland, severing the railway from Minsk northwest to Wilno.

Attack in South
Another struck far to the south and cut the other big line running from Minsk to Brest-Litovsk at Stolpe, Poland, forty-five miles southwest and captured Nevelsk, only twenty-five miles northwest of the railway junction of Baranovsk.

Yet another column driving directly on the city in concert with the outflanking columns captured Shoboda, twelve and one-half miles northeast of Minsk.

One northern arm of the Red army reached thirty-five miles into Old Poland and overran Sharkovskina, only fifty miles from the Latvian city of Daugavpils (Dvinsk), and an equal distance from the Daugavpils-Wilno railroad, said a broadcast communiqué recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Capture Many Villages
In all these sweeping advances the Russians still threatening far out in outflanking moves, captured nearly 1,000 towns and villages.

No reliable roads lead west out of Minsk and so once again it appeared that the Russian generals were in a position to chew up important chunks of the German armies of the east.

Premier Marshal Stalin in orders of the day sent his congratulations to Gen. Ivan D. Cherniakhovsky, whose troops cut the railway on the northwest, and Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky, who struck from the southwest.

Moscow's 224 guns were ordered to fire a salute, twenty salves for these new victories.

To the northwest of the fortress of Minsk, Gen. Ivan D. Cherniakhovsky's third White Russian army seized the important railway town of Kranevo, twenty-nine miles from the city on the railway to Wilno, and Wiljeja, eighteen miles farther on.

Russian Forces Unite
Southwest of Minsk, Marshal Rokossovsky's second army and Gen. Ivan D. Cherniakhovsky's first White Russian army captured Gorodets, twenty-five miles northeast of the junction of Baranovsk on the Minsk-Warsaw railway and highway. Nine miles south of Gorodets Nevelsk fell, bringing two forces into position for a direct assault on Baranovsk.

Between Gorodets and Minsk, Rokossovsky also took the rail and highway city of Stolpe, forty-five miles southwest of Minsk.

Moving on through Wiljeja, cavalry under Lt. Gen. Ostrikov galloped in the direction of Wilno, only sixty-seven miles to the west, beginning an immediate threat to that big hub of roads and railways.

Tanks Approach Minsk
As other units drove west, Cherniakhovsky's assault tanks and cavalry pounded closer to Minsk, reaching Shoboda, twelve and one-half miles to the northeast, and pushing down from Smolevich, twenty-three miles northeast and the last town on the Moscow-Warsaw railway before Minsk.

On the first Baltic front, Gen. Ivan Bagration's troops raced, through sparsely settled country fifty miles southeast of Daugavpils (Dvinsk), and occupied Sharkovskina, only thirty-five miles from the border of Lithuania.

The Germans' entire position in southern White Russia was endangered with Rokossovsky's new thrusts toward Pinsk.

Russian cavalry and medium tanks captured Starobino and surrounding villages sixty-nine miles northeast of Pinsk. Just eighteen miles south of Pinsk units of the first Ukrainian army, which has been there since the end of the winter, (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

BAINBRIDGE, Md., July 2 (AP)—Apprentice Seaman Arlie W. Elder, of Butler, Pa., reported for boot camp at the Bainbridge naval training center with a perfect set of teeth—and credits their condition to a diet of glass.

A professional at the game, he ate glass for a living five times a week—before entering the navy and his favorite tid-bit is a soft drink bottle. Station officials claimed that for the next few months any Elder will have to be satisfied with navy chow. Salvage has top priority on all used bottles at Bainbridge.

Robot Platforms Of Nazis Bombed

Powerful Blows Struck by Allies

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
LONDON, July 2.—(AP)—American and British heavy bombers dealt powerful blows against the German robot flying bomb launching platforms in the Pas De Calais area of France today as strong forces of Allied heavy bombers from Italy blasted oil refineries, rail yards and industrial areas near Budapest and at other points in Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Poor flying weather held Allied air support of the Normandy invasion troops to a minimum for the second straight day, but the campaign against the pillboxes, anti-aircraft guns and other defenses of the beach was continued by the strike today bringing to four the number of assaults against the flying bomb nests in twenty-four hours.

Bomb Robot Platforms
First up to 500 United States Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers, escorted by British Spitfires, pounded the robot launching platforms, dumped between 1,000 and 1,500 tons of explosives through heavy clouds on the launching platforms and other military objectives in the Pas De Calais area.

Hardly had they returned when Canadian bombers, operating by daylight as regularly as the American four-engine planes, slammed similar installations under an escort of British Spitfires.

Allied fighters operating from Normandy bases downed twenty-one German planes in combat today, nineteen being destroyed by Canadian Spitfire wings. The dog-fights were immediately ahead of the British army's fighting zone where earlier in the day Allied ground strafing planes destroyed many Nazi defenses, including anti-aircraft guns and reinforcements to the German lines.

Other Normandy-based fighters dive-bombed bridges over the Orne river and blasted mortar and gun positions in support of ground troops.

Bombing Continues
The Germans continued to send the flying bombs against Southern England last night and today. The British air ministry said a number of them were downed by RAF fighters and ground guns.

United States Liberator bombers returning to their Italian bases from the Budapest raid said the Rakovs yards in the northeastern section of the Hungarian capital, and the Manfred Weiss yards next to steelworks along the Danube river were severely damaged. Bombers also failed to return. No British heavy bombers were lost.

RAF heavy bombers, which joined American Liberators in a one-two punch at the rocket bomb nests shortly before dusk yesterday, thundered into Western Germany last night but the targets they attacked without loss still had not been identified by the air ministry at a late hour today.

Germans Taking Infantrymen

Allied warplanes again had a field day shooting up German motor transport and tanks.

German jets at Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces bristling against the Odon river slackened this morning after enemy tanks and infantry struck toward Baron, a mile below the river, at 4 a. m. today in the thirteenth fruitless assault on the Allied salient since yesterday.

Germans Thrown Back
Like all the others, the blow against Baron was met by a torrent of steel that threw the enemy into confusion and drove them back even before they reached British lines.

One thing is clear: The fury of Nazi counterattacks definitely has dwindled.

Reports that Rommel had taken direct charge of the Normandy campaign lacked official confirmation, but a staff officer said it would not be surprising.

The onetime "Desert Fox" who has been beaten by Montgomery every time they have clashed is noted for his foresight and tactical genius, and under his command the German effort may take a different turn from the blind, ram-like rushes at the flanks which have cost the enemy so heavily in the last four or five days.

For the first time on this front, British burial squads reported that German corpses were being booby-trapped and left behind as grisly devices of death.

ter campaign, pose a threat of encirclement.

Germans Confused
A reeling German army, which has suffered its worst defeat of the war in the field, was reported in panicky flight from all directions into Minsk. So confused were the Germans, according to Col. Alexander Karpov, Soviet military commentator, that "the troops are often losing their bearings and upon receiving a blow from the advancing Soviet forces on one or another sector, begin a retreat in the wrong direction."

These Red army advances were being made under what special air commentator Col. Nikolai Denisov called the Red army's greatest air offensive of the war—a "solid air umbrella" with which "the skies are indisputably dominated by our air force."

Genhart will tangle with Cumberland Heights at Poppy's. Hill and North End, Market, will take on the Yellow Jackets at Campobello.

Americans May Lose Bases in China, Fay Says

By ELTON C. FAY
Associated Press War Analyst

Japan's campaign in China may mean that American strategic bombers will lose Asiatic mainland bases, but the trend of fighting in the Pacific indicates that even better prospects for the bombardment of Nipponese war economy are in the making.

There is little disposition in military circles to discount the progress the enemy is making in his effort to crush Chinese armies and seize the airfields from which air attacks at Japanese industry and transportation are or may be directed.

But the reverse side of the picture is to be found in the Pacific and in the creation of the Twentieth Air Force of super-long distance B-29 bombers.

Saipan Being Occupied
Saipan is being secured, although only in prolonged and costly fighting. That island in the Marianas, 1,500 miles from Tokyo and the war plants and seaports on Honchu—an easy flight for the big Superfortresses.

But the enemy has expected his industries to be bombed. He has expected that the Japanese VAF plants, including steel mills to Japanese-occupied North China and Manchuria or duplicated their facilities in those areas.

He looked for air attack launched from China, from the Philippines and perhaps from the Aleutians. He has set out to take care of the Chinese air base menace; thinking that his plants in North China and Manchuria then should be safe.

There exists, however, another and highly dangerous quarter from which strategic bombing can be directed at him. The possibility is suggested in an article written by Commander H. B. Hutchinson in an issue of the United States naval institute proceedings.

Kurile Not Wanted
Hutchinson observes that in general fog and other adverse weather conditions rule out Japan's Kurile Islands as a good base for bombing operations.

He looks to Karafuto, at the south southern end of Sakhalin. The other half of the island is owned by Russia, but the Karafuto end is Japanese.

"Karafuto is enemy territory which is ours for the taking," he writes. "It has both winter and summer climates which offer possibilities for consistent flight operations. It is open to attack from Paramushiro at the north end of the Kuriles is ours, through the lower reaches of the sea of Okhotsk, both winter and summer. Our bombers with lighter escort can operate early from there against the industrial islands of Japan."

The repeated air and surface attacks on the Kuriles are significant. Although Hutchinson did not mention it, Karafuto is within easy air striking distance of Japan's transpacific factories. In North China and Manchuria, approximately 700 miles from both Japan's home island and Manchuria. What is more, the range would be within that of the "medium bombers," B-17s and B-24s.

Discussing man's part in the making of a better world, the Rev. Erville B. Maynard, rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal church in the city of Washington, said that the minds and hands of good men, to do the things we see we need.

A world away from the noise and excitement of the Chicago convention which nominated him four days ago, Governor and Mrs. Dewey occupied the "Governor's nest" on the middle aisle, in St. Peter's where they regularly attend.

No demonstration broke the Sunday quiet of historic Old State street as the Deweys stepped from their car to enter the church. A small crowd was on hand.

They chatted briefly with reporters, from whom they were drawn by gray-haired Mrs. Charles E. McElroy, a communicant of St. Peter's. She congratulated them on the governor's nomination and told him: "The women of this country are going to elect you."

Dewey resumes tomorrow a heavily-increased routine as governor, which he left last Wednesday to fly to Chicago to accept the presidential nomination for eleven a. m. press conference for eleven a. m. (EWT) at which he is expected to disclose his plans for the July Fourth holiday and the remainder of the week.

Cherbourg, but no worse than was expected and the work of clearance was going forward.

Near the center of the Normandy front, United States troops had punched rapidly to within two and one-half miles of St. Lo, a big communications hub.

"Fighting for St. Lo may be regarded as the overture to major Anglo-American actions in order to expand the beachhead," said Berlin radio, claiming heavy American losses in that area.

Supreme headquarters said the official count of prisoners in Normandy now had surpassed 40,000, with two-thirds of them taken by Americans. An Associated Press dispatch from Cherbourg said the doughboys clearing of Cap De La Hague northwest of Cherbourg had boosted the American bag of prisoners above 40,000, thus indicating that the over-all of German prisoners since D-Day was over 55,000.

The sixteen-inch guns of the British battleship Rodney sent shells screaming eighteen miles into Nazi positions south of Caen yesterday in support of the ground battles.

Meanwhile the Allied command reported that the German divisions in Italy during May and June represented elements of at least twenty-four German divisions as well as a number of miscellaneous units.

French troops closed in slowly on Siena, reaching one point within five miles of the city yesterday. Before becoming Red Cross chairman in 1938, he had served in various diplomatic posts under Presidents Wilson, Hoover and Roosevelt.

Headed Red Cross League
In addition to heading the American Red Cross, Davis also was chairman of the board of governors of the League of Red Cross Societies, composed of the organizations of sixty-one nations.

Red Cross headquarters in Washington made public the following telegram from President Roosevelt to one of Davis' four sons, Maclyn P. Davis of Nashville, Tenn.:

"I am shocked and saddened by the news of your father's untimely death and hasten to record my own sorrow in the sorrow which has been laid so heavily on you. He had worked far beyond his strength and is indeed a casualty of war. Mrs. Roosevelt joins me in this assurance of heartfelt sympathy to you and to all who mourn with you."

Made Fortune in Banking
Born Aug. 9, 1878, in Bedford county, Tenn., he entered the banking business in Cuba and at the age of thirty-five had amassed nearly $1,000,000. He thereupon withdrew from active business to enter public service.

Woodrow Wilson in 1917 made him a special delegate to Spain and later a treasury representative in London and Paris, and in 1919 appointed him assistant secretary of the treasury and later undersecretary of state.

Deweys Attend Church Service
Hear Their Pastor Predict New Age

ALBANY, N. Y., July 2 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for president, listened solemnly and attentively today to a 40-year-old cleric's assertion that "the new age is inexorably, fast, into a new age."

Discussing man's part in the making of a better world, the Rev. Erville B. Maynard, rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal church in the city of Washington, said that the minds and hands of good men, to do the things we see we need.

A world away from the noise and excitement of the Chicago convention which nominated him four days ago, Governor and Mrs. Dewey occupied the "Governor's nest" on the middle aisle, in St. Peter's where they regularly attend.

No demonstration broke the Sunday quiet of historic Old State street as the Deweys stepped from their car to enter the church. A small crowd was on hand.

They chatted briefly with reporters, from whom they were drawn by gray-haired Mrs. Charles E. McElroy, a communicant of St. Peter's. She congratulated them on the governor's nomination and told him: "The women of this country are going to elect you."

Dewey resumes tomorrow a heavily-increased routine as governor, which he left last Wednesday to fly to Chicago to accept the presidential nomination for eleven a. m. press conference for eleven a. m. (EWT) at which he is expected to disclose his plans for the July Fourth holiday and the remainder of the week.

Cherbourg, but no worse than was expected and the work of clearance was going forward.

Near the center of the Normandy front, United States troops had punched rapidly to within two and one-half miles of St. Lo, a big communications hub.

"Fighting for St. Lo may be regarded as the overture to major Anglo-American actions in order to expand the beachhead," said Berlin radio, claiming heavy American losses in that area.

Supreme headquarters said the official count of prisoners in Normandy now had surpassed 40,000, with two-thirds of them taken by Americans. An Associated Press dispatch from Cherbourg said the doughboys clearing of Cap De La Hague northwest of Cherbourg had boosted the American bag of prisoners above 40,000, thus indicating that the over-all of German prisoners since D-Day was over 55,000.

The sixteen-inch guns of the British battleship Rodney sent shells screaming eighteen miles into Nazi positions south of Caen yesterday in support of the ground battles.

forces have practically cleared the shores of Lake Trasimeno of Germans, a front dispatch said. The enemy was rapidly retreating to Arezzo in this central sector.

Meanwhile the Allied command reported that the German divisions in Italy during May and June represented elements of at least twenty-four German divisions as well as a number of miscellaneous units.

French troops closed in slowly on Siena, reaching one point within five miles of the city yesterday. Associated Press Correspondent Sid Peder said that French African units supported by American tanks and artillery had met the Germans on a wide plain and valley in the battle of Siena famous for its medieval architecture.

And there are burned out farms, bomb smashed native villages. Cane fields have been crushed and burnt, and the scruffy cane juice attracts millions of flies. Lost cows, pigs, goats and chickens roam wild.

Mine Workers Form New Unit

Hope To Elect Own District Officers

CINCINNATI, July 2 (AP)—Members of the United Mine Workers seeking the right to elect their own district officers and international executive board formed a temporary organization today to carry their fight to the union's biennial convention in September.

The autonomy movement, sparked by Ray Edmundson of Springfield, Ill., who recently quit as appointive president of the UMW's Illinois district and now is a candidate for John L. Lewis' job as UMW president, attracted about eighty delegates to a day-long conference.

Edmundson announced they came from thirteen districts east of the Mississippi, plus district 50, a non-miner unit which has no local boundaries.

Defies John L. Lewis
Edmundson, whom the delegates elected as temporary vice chairman of the autonomy and self-government conference, told the meeting "the miners need no potentate and no royal family with the United Mine Workers. I say to those here out they are going to be the servants and not the masters of the men who work in the mines. Come the September convention, autonomous district officers will elect John L. Lewis and his appointive officials like it or not."

Edmundson's candidacy was not mentioned in the meeting, and there was only one reference to national politics in all the discussion. Joseph J. Diemian, Grant Town, W. Va., elected chairman of the organization, said that in the Mier's wage battle over the past year and a half, "an effort was made to discredit every government agency which is necessary in time of war to keep prices from going sky high."

Scores High Officials
He charged the union's top officials pressed demands which they knew the War Labor Board could not approve and omitted "the things which they knew the War Labor Board could approve in order to discredit the president and the administration." He added:

"I don't think there was a miner in the country who wanted to stop the production of coal. It was not loyalty to John L. Lewis, but loyalty to the organization."

The conference adopted fifteen resolutions calling for changes not only in the union's constitution and laws, but in the contract with the operators. One of these declared that the lunch period which was cut from thirty to fifteen minutes by the new contract is insufficient and that interpretations of the wage and hour act provide that rest or lunch periods of twenty minutes or less shall be paid for by the employer.

man lines. The German officers saluted formally, wheeled and walked away.

A few minutes later the guns began booming again.

So far as is known here, this is the first time in World War two where German women have been returned to the enemy. There was no effort at an exchange because the Germans never have captured any American nurses.

This was not an act of chivalry on the part of the Americans. As a matter of fact the army was glad to be rid of the eight women, who would be only a minor nuisance if held and no one saw any reason why they should be detained since they were non-combatants.

They were captured in an enemy hospital at Cherbourg, but as soon as the Americans were able to handle the enemy wounded they were brought to a rear area and negotiations were started to get them back to their own people.

They ranged in age from 30 to 58. The oldest nurse was a veteran of the first world war when she served in Russia, Bulgaria, France and other fronts.

Most of them were tearfully happy when informed they would not be held prisoner but would be returned to their own lines.

They stayed in an American hospital commanded by Col. Richard Johnson of Chicago, and were under the supervision of Maj. Esther McCafferty of Wilmington, Del.

They were given American cigarettes and food and were shown about the hospital which caused one of them to exclaim:

"Mein Gott, did you bring all this with you?"

Medal of Honor

Lt. Clarence R. Nelson, Brookfield, Ill., was wounded gravely.

Truemper, the navigator, and Mathies, the engineer-gunner, fought their way out of a spin and headed it home. They reported to the control tower of a field in England, volunteering to attempt to land the plane (although they lacked experience) and get the unconscious pilot down alive. The control tower ordered the members of the crew to bail out.

Col. Eugene A. Romig, Byersville, Ohio, commanding officer of the bomber group, took off in a plane, first attempting to make radio contact with the damaged plane to advise the two pinch-hitter pilots how to land. Unable to establish radio contact, he sought to fly wing-to-wing with the bomber to guide it in to a landing but the battered bomber, yawing badly, prevented this.

The control tower then ordered Truemper and Mathies to take to their chutes, but they reported the pilot was still alive and they refused to leave him. They made two runs over the field, but were unable to land. On the third attempt, the bomber crashed, killing the three men.

Fifty boys between the ages of 10 to 14 years were taken on an all-day hike, Wednesday, to John's Rock by Tommy Lewis and Robert Kirby, senior leaders. ## The Fateful Question

That Must Be Answered

AMERICANS who agree that this country has many problems that are necessary even in wartime, and certainly more than it should tolerate in postwar years, but who complacently believe that this situation will automatically right itself when the sound of the last cannon is heard are victims of the greatest delusion ever harbored by mortals.

This highly desirable objective will be attained when peace comes if the voters in November reject the theory that any man is indispensable. It will be achieved in no other way. The theory that there is a man who is indispensable will be buttressed during the campaign by the most powerful political oligarchy that was ever created, the New Deal party of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

This political party is owned and controlled by one man, a man who, when the force of its "convention" is staged in Chicago in July, will name himself for president, will name the candidate for vice president, and approve every word that is permitted to go into the platform. Delegates to this convention will be handy men of corrupt big city political machines and federal job-holders.

But, the work of the Republican national convention at Chicago has given pause to the cynical and sinister advocates of absolutism in the United States. They are thriving on the pocketbooks of the taxpayers, but their minds wander to next January, and they begin to wonder. They dimly remember that in New York city a racketeering boss political crook to jail, and that his name was Dewey.

To the millions of independent voters of America, the name of Dewey in the name of the national political horizon like a fresh breeze, dispelling the odor arising from crooked city political machines and alienisms that seek to destroy America.

If these are strong words, these are times that call for no other. Time is fleeting, and the decision that must be made in November is a momentous one. Shall the American of the future be dependent upon government handouts for a living, with opportunity for advancement open only to those who grovel and exult in abject servility to agents of an all-powerful state?

Or shall America again be free, with liberty and opportunity for all—a greater and more prosperous America, but an America which is still the home of a people enjoying all the blessings that have, immemorially, been denied to men whose misfortune has been that they had no alternative but to live out their lives under the burden of too much government?

War Figures That Prompt Thoughts of the Future

ACCORDING to Soviet statistics Russia has lost 5,000,000 killed, missing or captured, while the Germans have lost in Russia 7,800,000 killed or captured. This is a grand total of 13,000,000 men lost on both sides in three years.

It has been said that this war is less lethal than World War I because soldiers have the protection of machines. This is disputed by the figures released by Moscow. In the other war a million former Russians were killed or taken prisoner. In fact, the killed or captured in Russia alone this time are nearly equal to the killed and captured of all nations in World War I. All nations in that conflict lost 8,338,315 killed and 7,750,919 prisoners and missing, a total of more than 16,000,000. 3,000,000 more than the killed and captured on the eastern front in three years of this war.

In addition to hostilities on the Russian front, the fighting has been bloody in North Africa, Italy and France. Probable losses in China have been nearly as heavy as those in Russia. The killed and captured in this war total at least 25,000,000 in military classes alone. And more civilians have suffered and died than in any previous conflict.

What will be the fatalities in this war in battle dead, slain civilians and deaths from disease and famine—50,000,000? Whatever it is, it will be a staggering figure, a figure that should give the human race pause when reflecting what the lethal instruments of another war will be far more efficient and their application more ruthless.

No, Our Frontiers

Have Not Vanished

AMONG THE ECHOES from the Republican national convention—and they will be long and many—is one that contains an echo from other days. That is the spirit of defeatism embodied in the formerly espoused doctrine of scarcity. Governor Warren, of California, gave it attention in his brilliant and hopeful keynote speech.

The belief that we have come to the end of the road, that a dead-end street is all that we have ahead of us—that will not produce jobs and opportunity," he said. "That belief is defeatism. The fruit of defeatism is an economy of scarcity. We know what scarcity produces. It produces scarcity of jobs, of opportunity, of the good things of life."

That spirit of defeatism was enunciated at various times and places by Mr. Roosevelt and his followers. Our frontiers had vanished, they said, opportunity was limited if not gone, government planning was a necessary resort.

Whereas, as Governor Warren said, this spirit must be supplanted with a spirit of hope, with appreciation of the boundless frontiers that are actually before this nation and its people. The answer in large part is production, the means of production, and a climate favoring production. And it is private production that counts, as government itself does not produce. —and the jobs and opportunity which it makes—," Governor Warren said, "can come only in a climate that is friendly to production. A climate that is friendly to production requires a government that is friendly to production. It requires a government which believes that our economic soil, far from being worn out, is still life-giving; a government which believes that those who work honorably and well to make that soil produce, far from being a threat to our well-being, are the hope of it; a government which, far from penalizing production, encourages it; a government which believes in an economy of plenty because its aim for all the people is abundance."

Exactly so; and records have been backed within recent years have never before by the opening of new horizons in every direction by the work of the researchers and the scientists. Daily we read of new advances in plastics, in chemistry, in mechanics, in foods and what not. No, the frontiers have not vanished in America; they are being constantly revealed; and, as Governor Warren said, we must take advantage of the opportunities they open and we should have a governmental policy that will encourage the people to seize that advantage rather than one which is static and which breathes and fosters a destructive spirit of hopelessness.

Much Soldiering Is Yet To Be Done

ADDITIONAL EVIDENCE that Washington does not think the war in Europe is approaching the end is found in the report that the United States now has nearly 4,000,000 men deployed outside the nation. By the end of the year that number will be increased to 5,000,000. Shipments will continue well into 1945, which indicates the war is expected to last at least that long.

The United States had approximately 2,000,000 men overseas at the end of World War I, at which time the nation's total armed strength was 4,000,000. Before the end of the present conflict, more than 12,000,000 men and women will have been recruited and trained. War department officials are reported to be receiving many complaints from parents whose 18-year-old sons have been shipped overseas after limited training. Some of these, inducted less than a year ago, have been killed in Italy. These parents assert it was their understanding boys in the 18-year-old class would not be sent abroad for at least a year after induction. Denying that such a promise was made, officials say they have held to the practice that no one under 19 could go over with infantry divisions. As to other units, officials say it has been found impossible to hold to that rule.

There is much soldiering still to be done before the war is over, and Washington certainly will have the manpower available to insure victory.

One of the most effective answers to the stream-crossing argument used by the fourth-termers was given at Chicago by Governor Warren. "For eleven long years," he said, "we have been in the middle of the stream. We are not amphibious; we want to get across." And that we do.

The heat at Chicago during the convention was mild compared to the heat Dewey intends to apply to the fourth termers.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

A touch of literary snobishness in the Browser made him wonder if Elinor Berlin's novel "Land I Have Chosen" (Doubleday Doran) could be better than third rate. He humbly admits that snobishness now that he has read the novel—and wishes to go on record. This novel is worth reading. After all, you know, Elinor Mackay Berlin is not a professional writer. She has written a considerable number of short stories, none of which aroused the Browser's admiration. But she has not undergone the long, hard training of the writer who earns a living by writing. She was a rich man's daughter who knew her own heart and married Irving Berlin and found her happiness in that marriage. But that has nothing to do with the ability to write and the writing world is cluttered with those who are writers and those who merely want to be writers. The Browser feared that Mrs. Berlin belonged in this second group.

But she doesn't. The Browser is not about to go off the deep end and declare that she is a genius. After all, only an occasional character in this "Land I Have Chosen" has much reality. The style lacks clarity and simplicity. Much of the talk is sentimental and "literary." But — Elinor Berlin has a sound story to tell and she has not missed her aim. It is a tale of Germany and of America, of a few sound, brave human beings who know what living should be and are not afraid of simple living, and of a considerable number of "frightened people" who barter even their own happiness for "safety" or power or "social distinction."

Viking reports that Upton Sinclair's "Wide Is the Gate" had twenty percent higher advance sale than any other book in the Lanny Budd series. The award of the Pulitzer Prize helped — and it has just occurred to the Browser for the first time that Upton Sinclair was the logical author to refuse that prize. Instead of Sinclair Lewis and Bill Saroyan. Once upon a time he might have done so with fine socialist contempt.

Elliot Paul, even in Hollywood, has been able to write two defective stories, practically simultaneously. Go Random House will publish them in one volume, "Summer in December" and "I'll Hate Myself in the Morning."

Three recent books were written by graduates of Brown university: Quentin Reynolds' "The Curtain Rises," S. P. Perelman's "Crazy Like a Fox," and Howard Hunt's "Limit of Darkness."

Knopf is publishing Alexander Woolcott's personal letters and there's not a mean one in the lot. The editors explain that not one of that genre was submitted; those who received them probably burned them at once.

Irving Stone has just written his first biological novel since "Lust for Life." It is "Immortal Wife," the story of Jesse Benton Fremont, wife of The Pathfinder. Blind Prophecy. There will be yells of protest. Enough from Marsh Maslin.

GOOD HUNTING, MR. DEWEY

Briefing Method Followed by Dewey Is Praised As Making for Right Decisions

By PAUL MALLON

CHICAGO, July 2—Republican Nominee Tom Dewey's method of handling a problem is first to have it "briefed." He designates one of his men to analyze both sides thoroughly, to set these down in writing, saying "on the one hand there is this factor," and on the other hand there is this." He takes this evidence, discusses it with his counselors, then makes his decision. Thus his tendencies and conclusions bespeak primarily a search for judicial justice. He is extraordinarily free from average prejudices. His driving passion is to be right. There are some who criticize this guiding method of the man, saying it leads to decisions too coolly conceived and devoid of failures and mistakes to which humanity in its leadership and daily life seems commonly condemned. The criticism is short-sighted.

Not for Leadership

Perhaps people may well like to be guided in their lives by emotionalism and wholly human considerations, which may not be right, but for their leadership to plunge all hope and faith for the future and tip even justice itself into the cauldron of philosophical fires. (Like the Hitler leadership of unreasoned torchbearing and hatreds.) I guess this is what interests me most in the new young leadership which is taking over the Republic: opposition because the Wilkie leadership popularly failed. Perhaps I am prejudiced, because for nearly fourteen years I have seen a government operate without "briefing," without judicial choices coolly arrived at, and I think this is why its economic solutions particularly have never worked out successfully. It got votes, but it never got the problem solved.

Makes Him Tick

At any rate this is what makes Dewey tick. I suppose that intellectually Mr. Roosevelt would be classified as a politician. His decisions reflect that instinct. In his way he is superior to any public man I have met in twenty-five years of political reporting. To gauge the contrast which may be offered by Dewey, if elected, I have collected the evidences of his gubernatorial and convention workings on one hand and the other, not only from politicians assembled here but from the thinking men and I can "brief" the candidate himself thus:

Intellectually, Dewey must not be classified as a lawyer, or politician. Rather he is an administrator. As district attorney and governor he chose to lead a bright young band, and to rely upon them for the spade work but not as Roosevelt did, for ideologies. He leads them only in the sense that an administrator assigns work to them and makes the final conclusion from their work. He does not try to dominate the thoughts of his associates or press them to his viewpoint. This is evident in the fact that no one who ever worked for him has resigned a remarkable record.

A Hard Worker

Few men like work as he does. He remained behind after his convention to shake 3,000 hands the first night and to thrust out campaign materials to the hundreds of leaders assembled here. He did not choose an outlying hotel, but remained at convention headquarters. He likes Bricker, who did much inside work on the platform in daily breakfast consultations with Senator Taft. His convention tribute to Bricker was not only an extraordinary consideration for a second man, but wise, and Bricker will no doubt be a vice-presidential candidate in fact instead of the usual appendage. The passing of California's Governor Warren left no noticeable dismay around the Dewey headquarters. Most newsmen here guessed Warren thought he could not carry California and therefore had no place on the ticket. I suspect some reasons were more important, possibly some investments he has made have not been wise, and with six children to rear, he may not have thought he could afford a vice-presidential campaign or tenancy.

Palestine Plank an Example

Dewey's handling of the Jewish problem (which always calls for wise practicalism in a state like New York) is another primary example of his instinct for unprejudiced administration. It was his man who put the Palestine plank in the platform, for the first time any political party had mentioned it. Conspicuous also here in his behalf was Nathaniel Goldstein, his attorney general, whom he designated in preference to a personal friend. Efforts to bestir class antagonisms against him on this score will be difficult.

He has no advisors who guide his political thoughts. His friends are few, mostly neighbors, the Pat Hogans (New York businessmen and college classmates) and the Rogers Strausses. They do not bother with politics, and apparently furnish his relaxation from same. His wife is a home-and-children type who will not be conspicuous either in the campaign or White House.

This "briefing" sums up completely for me, answering the questions in my mind about him, and forecasts the type of campaign and government you may expect to be offered.

Press Conference By Dewey Brings A Good Reaction

By DAVID LAWRENCE

CHICAGO, July 2—National conventions may shout themselves hoarse with enthusiasm for their nominees, but it is not until the writing members of the press, whose duty it is to scrutinize the words and acts of public men, take a good look at the candidate and appraise him that he really can say he has "arrived."

Governor Dewey of New York passed his first examination with a high mark. Almost unanimously the newspaper correspondents afterward remarked that he had "handled himself well."

What the reporters really meant was that, however they may differ as to the views or points of view

Hog Money Raises Some Cold Facts About Payments

By SAMUEL B. PETTINGILL

Two men sat at a table. One was an optimist, the other a pessimist. On the table was a wine bottle. The upper half was filled with air, the lower half with wine.

The optimist said, licking his lips, "It's half full." The pessimist said gloomily, "It's half empty."

They laughed. "Strange, isn't it?" said the optimist. "Same bottle. Same set of facts. Yet we draw opposite conclusions."

And then they got talking about the war.

The optimist said, "See that. A hundred ten-dollar bills. A thousand bucks. Sold Uncle Sam forty hogs yesterday. Top price. Sure laying it away these days. Same as everybody. If the war only lasts a couple of years longer I'll have the mortgage clean paid."

Payment Questioned

"You're crazy," said the pessimist. "What did Papa Government give you for your hogs?"

"Why, these hundred tens. Good aren't they?"

"Listen, you dope. Papa didn't give you anything for your hogs except police protection."

"Don't make me laugh."

"You won't laugh when you come to—a year or so from now. Dream on. Enjoy your nap."

"Okay, rouse me!"

"Let's have a drink first." They did. The bottle was now one-quarter full, three-quarters empty.

Dealing with Two Men

"When you sold your hogs, you were dealing with two men, not one. One you saw. The other you didn't. The one you saw was the purchasing agent. He gave you the $1,000 and drove off with your hogs. The man you overlooked is a fellow named Morgenthau. He said you owed him $250.00 income tax. Right? And you forked it over. Then he said that you ought to buy a bond for $750.00. And being a patriotic citizen, as you are, you gave him the $750.00 also. Am I right?"

"Right as rain."

"And then Morgenthau handed the $250.00 and the $750.00 over to the purchasing agent. Total $1,000. And the purchasing agent handed the $1,000 back to you in payment for your hogs. How much did you make on the deal?"

The optimist scratched his head. "Now, wait a minute. There's a catch in there somewhere. Guess I did get only $750.00 for the hogs after subtracting the tax. But I got the government bond, haven't I?"

Not Papa's Money

"Sure. But don't forget that it was your money and not Papa's that bought it. And that Papa gave you nothing for your hogs."

"Well, Papa will pay the bond some day, won't he?"

"Sure. If Papa doesn't tax you to death for boondoggle when the war is over, so you can still pay Papa $750.00 in taxes, so Papa can give it back to you for your bond. You might tell Papa to take some of his bureaucrats off your neck. That would help you pay him so he could pay you."

"I need a drink," said the optimist.

"Help yourself," said the pessimist.

Harold Keller Hamilton Gaddis

Elliott V. Bell Charles D. Breitell

one to make promises of appointments until he investigates all angles.

Hand-Picked Advisors

Dewey's advisors are carefully hand-picked. The relation between himself and these men is intimate and unusual in politics, perhaps because most of the Dewey "brain trust" were not politicians when they joined the "inner circle." On the job, they are always on call. Whether or not Dewey follows their recommendations, they all are urged to be present at discussions to defend their views.

Selection of his men is typified in his choice of a press relations assistant. He thought about newspapermen he had known and campaigned with. He chose an energetic little Irishman, James C. Hagerly, a New York Times reporter, with whom he had not always agreed, but who was young, capable and aggressive, the kind of man Dewey likes. Hagerly accepted the job. Dewey, as governor, enjoyed a favorable press.

Dewey Solicits Advice

Discussion has solved many problems as Dewey held the helm for New York state. Legislative Republicans, under a Democratic governor, soon learned through midnight conferences that they were working with a determined leader; some of them termed the meetings a call before "the boss." In any event, most of Dewey's major recommendations were enacted into law.

Often Dewey looks to his "inner circle" for advice. It is not unusual for him to say in a press conference that "John (John E. Burton, state budget director) is working on this. He thinks it can be done this way." Dewey is young and appreciates youth. Most of his staff of first line assistants average less than 40 years of age. Considering their political connections secondary, he drafted them liberally from the group who helped him in his successful anti-racket campaigning in New York city—men used to long hours, hard work and discipline.

Only one older man plays on the team—Hamilton Gaddis, a political veteran of 53, a former mayor of Malverne, N. Y., and a successful business man, who is in charge of patronage problems.

Other key men are outstanding because they have no extensive political background. Big, husky Paul Lockwood, an amiable bachelor, is more than a gubernatorial secretary. Neither a stranger to politics nor a professional politician, he was a founder of the New York State Association of Young Republicans. Eagle and the old New York Evening World, a graduate of Fordham Law School, and a member of Dewey's prosecutor staff in New York.

Other Key Men

Then, there are Charles D. Breitell, the chief executive's counsel; Elliott V. Bell, state superintendent of banks; and Harold Keller, director of state public and deputy commissioner in the division of commerce. All are young. Breitell, once Dewey's assistant prosecutor in "the baby" at 35.

Bell, 41, was chosen bank superintendent because Dewey liked his background. He, like Hagerly, was drafted from the New York Times, where he was a financial editor. Bell also aids Dewey in many jobs beyond his department's sphere.

Dewey's reliance on former newspaper men is also seen in his appointment of Keller, a former copy editor and reporter for the New York American. He was Dewey's confidential secretary when the governor was a prosecutor. Two Democrats have been retained in the unofficial "state cabinet." The governor explained he liked them and thought them capable.

New appointees were first examined under police microscope. Dewey used state police investigators to prod into the private lives of many. Candidates who resented the inquiries didn't get the jobs.

War Bond Sales Hit $3,350,630

"E" Bond Purchases Are $675,718 below Quota Set for County

Allegheny county's "E" bond purchases in the Fifth War Loan Drive reached $3,350,630 while total sales for "E" issues amounted to $3,350,630, according to a report issued yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va.

The report included all bond sales in the county through Saturday, June 29.

This report indicates that the sale of "E" bonds is $675,718 below the quota of $1,000,000 set for the county.

Total sales of bonds, however, are $350,630 above the quota of $3,000,000 set at the start of the campaign which ends July 8. All sales in July will count in the current drive.

Sales of "E" bonds in the corresponding period of the Fourth War Loan Drive were $378,556.25. In this drive the county quota of "E" bonds was $900,000 or $100,000 less than the goal in the present campaign.

Joseph M. Naughton, county chairman, yesterday said that "E" bond sales during the past week showed a slight increase over the preceding week, but to reach the quota a great many people in the county must purchase "E" bonds.

"Of the seven different issues of bonds being offered in this drive series 'E' are most attractive, especially for the small investor," Naughton declared. "Allegheny county in all previous drives has done very well in the sale of 'E' bonds, and our committee is confident that the citizens will not fail us in this most crucial campaign."

Sgt. Heavner Took Part in Daylight Attack on Rabaul

Admits He Was More Scared on Bomber Forced Down in Brazil Jungles

Staff Sgt. Earl J. Heavner, 29, of RFD 3, Cumberland, engineer-gunner on a Mitchell medium bomber, took part in the first daylight raid on Rabaul, according to information furnished by headquarters of the Army Air Forces Redistribution Station No. 1, Atlantic City, N. J.

Sgt. Heavner helped cover the American landings at Cape Gloucester and Arawe on New Britain Island and in the Admiralty Islands and helped wipe out a Jap convoy.

"But I was more scared when I was on a bomber that was forced down in the jungles of Brazil than on any mission," Heavner said at the AAF Redistribution Station here, where he will receive a new assignment.

The sergeant's wife, Madeline, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Franklin, live on RFD 3, Cumberland.

Landed in Swamp

"We ran into a thunderhead over Brazil and got lost," Heavner said. "There were only a few drops of gas left when we spotted a swamp clearing and were down."

"All of use were shaken up but nobody was hurt and natives guided us out. There couldn't have been a happier ending to that adventure. But when we were still in the air, lost and running out of gas, we were scared."

In combat, so much is happening and you are so busy, there isn't time to be afraid," he said.

Heavner took part in the first daylight attack on the big Jap base at Rabaul last October 12.

"We left fires everywhere and destroyed seventeen planes on the ground," the Marylander declared, "but it was as exciting as the day we sent a Jap convoy to the bottom off the coast of New Ireland."

Attack from Mast Height

"Six Mitchells made the attack from mast height. I was in the first plane to make a pass and we skip-bombed a destroyer. From my position at the tail gun I saw it split in two and sink immediately. It was the biggest thrill of my life."

"After we got rid of our bombs we made several more passes and I put 500 rounds of ammunition into the Jap ships."

Altogether the six of us sank three destroyers and two freighters and were loaded with troops. We left a gunboat damaged, and the Navy got it soon after we left."

Heavner went overseas and arrived in the Southwest Pacific a year ago this month.

McCullough Quits Playground Post

Supervisor Takes Exception to Remarks Made by McDonald

William E. McCullough, playground supervisor, resigned his post after making a routine report on activities to playground leaders and association representatives at city hall Saturday afternoon.

Charging William E. McDonald, finance commissioner, with "cheap political publicity," McCullough denied the accusation under which he became supervisor, stating it included visiting playgrounds at least twice weekly.

"There was no mention of working from seven to nine hours daily," McCullough said. "What I do on my own time is my own business. I have been available seven days a week."

The play leaders work five. Commissioner McDonald had raised the question of hours worked by McCullough at meetings last Monday and Friday of the mayor and council. McDonald said he had been informed McCullough was not giving enough time to the supervisory job for which the city was paying him $100 monthly for three and one-half months.

Gene McNabb, a male leader at East Side, who said there is no need for a male leader there as many of the older boys work in the day, resigned. Mrs. Mary McCullough, wife of the supervisor, also resigned her job as North End leader.

Enjoys Morning News, Cpl. Chas. T. Beckwith Writes His Parents

Cpl. Charles T. Beckwith, HQRS. Three hundred and seventy sixth Bomb Group, gets his Cumberland News fairly regularly although he obviously is many thousands of miles from his home city. In a recent letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Beckwith, 425 Independence street, he told that while his copies of the News are several weeks on the way he can't complain because letters take the same time reaching him.

Cpl. Beckwith told his parents he greatly enjoys the News and with magazines which arrive somewhat late he manages to keep abreast of world events.

Commenting on the news which indicates that many married men are going in the army he expressed the opinion that the war is as much a young man's war as it is a single man's and while it is tough for a man to leave his wife and children the important thing is to get men in service to "get this mess over with, the sooner the better."

Federal Reports Show Betterments Effected in Mines

Companies at Eckhart and Vindex Have Adopted Added Safeguards

Detailed reports describing recent federal reinspections of two coal mines in Garrett and Allegheny counties, were made public yesterday by Dr. R. R. Sayers. The reports describe betterments effected in the mines during the past several months and also contain recommendations for additional safeguards. Dr. Sayers informed Secretary of Interior Harold I. Ickes.

Improvements resulted from recommendations made by state and federal inspectors and the adoption of additional safeguards on the companies' own initiative, Dr. Sayers said.

Following are summaries of the inspection reports:

Manor No. 3 mine, Johnstown Coal and Coke Company, Vindex, Garrett county; 205 employees; daily production, about 1,200 tons. Re-inspected by J. C. Davis. Among the many improvements were the construction of a combination emergency hospital, office, and operating building, installation of a new fan, main haulage way ventilated with intake air, and increased use of line brattices, improved fire-fighting facilities, an organized fire brigade, and regular fire drills, telephones installed underground, machine cuttings removed, shelter holes provided at regular intervals, and monthly safety meetings of workers and officials. Recommendations prescribed ventilation betterments, posted timbering rules and better handling and use of explosives, adequate control of coal dust, in multiple and underground added protection against fire and electrical ignition and shock hazards, better haulage facilities, guards at mechanical and structural hazards, organizing a safety committee, and regular training of all employees in first aid.

No. 10 mine, Consolidated Fuel Company, Inc., Eckhart mines, Allegheny county; 112 employees; average daily production, 400 tons. Re-inspected by J. C. Davis. Improvements: use of permissible flame safety lamps by officials, removal of machine cuttings, testing working places for gas, inspections for fire device at the main fan, purchasing a rock-dusting machine, use of safety belts by men handling road cars, providing better underground fire protection, better clearance on belt conveyors. Recommendations called for removing blower and booster fans from the mine, improving ventilation and ventilating facilities, exclusive use of permissible explosives and safer storing and handling of blasting materials, closer attention to roof control, and instructing all underground employees in the vibration method of rock testing, better protection against shock and fire hazards, adequate control of coal dust, safer haulage conditions, exclusive use of permissible electric cap lamps, underground, additional training of employees in first aid, and wearing of safety hats and hard-toe shoes by all employees.

Attached to the Fifth division, Sixty-first regiment, of the regular army, the Rev. Mr. Eisenberger set up a mobile canteen in France, supplying the American soldiers with candy, cigarettes, stationery and reading materials. Fifty-seven volunteers who went overseas with his group were stationed at various points in the British Isles and France.

After completing his studies at Princeton Theological seminary, the Rev. Mr. Eisenberger was ordained June 10, 1913, by the Presbytery of Washington, D. C., and was pastor of the Presbyterian church in Berkeley, Md., for five years before going overseas.
